

Please continue the ban of cellphones on aircrafts. As a flight attendant I can only imagine the trouble phones on aircraft will cause. Imagine being on a long flight in the middle seat with people on both sides of you having long, loud phone conversations when all you want to do is sleep on your flight. I also foresee arguments between customers because one person is too loud and the other can not hear his/her phone call.

Another scenario (which happens on the ground) is the use of profanity on the phone that children in the aircraft are exposed too. I have also experienced customers that have started screaming into the phone which makes others around them uncomfortable and often offended.

A safety risk that can occur is passengers on the phone while safety demos and videos are being presented causing that customer and others around them to miss important information.
